

There's no sense at all in the building of houses in the field Ref site Wem012. The devastating floods of this winter surely adds attention to building on flood plains. The proposed site is extremely marshy leaving the bungalows against the proposed field flooded as soon as the heavy rainfalls appear. The infrastructure is not compatible, the traffic in and out is dangerous at the moment, more traffic would be very worrying. Our other great concern is the sewerage and water table. We have had to call Severn Trent to unblock drains numerous times. Infact far too often. The smell is very upsetting. The last callout to Severn Trent was March 21st. The sewerage can't cope now. So what will the outcome be?
